Andrew Bradbury	Topic Expert	Direct - non-financial professional and personal	Previously worked on a research project at Birmingham City University exploring the barriers to returning online requested STI self-sampling testing kits from the patient's perspective. The title of the study is 'Barriers to Return of Home Sampling Kits for Sexually Transmitted Infections Ordered Online: A Qualitative Study'. The study was in partnership with Umbrella, which is the sexual health delivery service Birmingham and Solihull. The study was funded by University Hospitals Birmingham NHS Foundation Trust. My involvement in the study was during the planning stages and was entirely desk-based with no contact with external stakeholders or (potential) participants. The start date of the study was February 2020 with a planned duration for 12 months. Earliest publication date will be February 2021. Birmingham City University received payment from University Hospitals Birmingham NHS Foundation Trust.	May 2019	August 2020	January 2020	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Declare and participate - subject to review at each committee meeting and the matter under discussion. Rationale: despite being a specific interest there is currently no need to withdraw. This decision will be reviewed once the evidence base for RQ2 is confirmed
