Disclaimer

The recommendations in this guideline represent the view of NICE, arrived at after careful consideration of the evidence available. When exercising their judgement, professionals are expected to take this guideline fully into account, alongside the individual needs, preferences and values of their patients or service users. The recommendations in this guideline are not mandatory and the guideline does not override the responsibility of healthcare professionals to make decisions appropriate to the circumstances of the individual patient, in consultation with the patient and, where appropriate, their carer or guardian.

Local commissioners and providers have a responsibility to enable the guideline to be applied when individual health professionals and their patients or service users wish to use it. They should do so in the context of local and national priorities for funding and developing services, and in light of their duties to have due regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination, to advance equality of opportunity and to reduce health inequalities. Nothing in this guideline should be interpreted in a way that would be inconsistent with compliance with those duties.

NICE guidelines cover health and care in England. Decisions on how they apply in other UK countries are made by ministers in the Welsh Government, Scottish Government, and Northern Ireland Executive. All NICE guidance is subject to regular review and may be updated or withdrawn.

1.4 Acknowledgements:

We are greatly appreciative of Professor Alex Sutton and the contributors to the "Tranexamic acid in reducing expected blood loss in moderate to low risk surgeries: systematic review, meta-analysis and cost effectiveness analysis" study (referred to as Jaiswal, et al. 2025 in the evidence review). This study was fundamental to the development of our effectiveness review, assessing the clinical and cost-effectiveness of tranexamic acid for surgeries where there is a low risk of blood loss. A large proportion of this work was incorporated into the guideline and used to conduct additional analyses. We acknowledge the work of the original authors.
