NICE Technology Appraisal Guidance No. 49; Ultrasonic locating devices for the placement of central venous lines

Static List Review - September 2016

TA49; Ultrasonic locating devices for the placement of central venous lines, was added to the static list in September 2010.

As the appraisal has been on the static list for more than 5 years, NICE has been gathering intelligence to ascertain whether there is any new evidence available relevant to this appraisal and whether this should be considered through the full review proposal process.

We have concluded that there has been no change in the evidence base that is likely to lead to a change in the existing recommendations.

As a result, we have decided that TA49 should remain on the static list and no further action is required at this time.
