Management of Multiple Pregnancy

25 November 2013

Management of Multiple Pregnancy 25 November

Overview

The incidence of multiple pregnancy is rising, secondary to the use of assisted reproductive techniques. Multiple pregnancy is associated with increased maternal and perinatal mortality and morbidity.

The maternal mortality is 2.5 times higher in twin, compared to singleton, pregnancies. Almost 50% of twin pregnancies deliver before 37 weeks' gestation.

Many clinicians who are confident when managing complicated singleton pregnancies feel uneasy caring for women with multiple pregnancy.

A recent survey has shown that the level of familiarity with the NICE guideline on "Antenatal Management of Multiple Pregnancy" is poor, and implementation suboptimal. It will provide a comprehensive update on the management of multiple pregnancy and all sessions will have dedicated time for audience interaction.
